There really is no certain ONE style for Balenciaga women's shoes, and that's great, because there are so many styles and colors, and that means you can find that perfect pair, for that perfect occasion. When you need that unique shoe style, something a little risqué; and just a tad exciting, then you need to really look at the Balenciaga line. Who is Balenciaga? Balenciaga is one of the top fashion design houses of the day. This designing firm was founded by Cristobal Balenciaga, who began acquiring fame as a designer around 1914. Today the Balenciaga line mainly focuses on accessories, but is one of the most renowned fashion houses in the world. Is it any wonder that with so much experience, they wouldn't have some of the most gorgeous styles in women's footwear? Who Wears Balenciaga? Balenciaga is a symbol of elegance, style and wealth and many of today's celebrities continue to use Balenciaga. Celebrities like Keri Russell, and Katherine Heigl, love these classic yet fashionable shoe styles. Balenciaga footwear whether boots, pumps, or flats are designed to be stylishly unique and extremely comfortable. This may be why Balenciaga shoes tend to be so popular among women of all walks of life.

Trends for 2008 The Balenciaga shoe collection this year as in previous years comes in stylish, bright colors, unique shapes, making your whole outfit come together perfectly. If you want to spice up your wardrobe, and pull your fashion sense together, then you need to see the Balenciaga collection. There are many different styles which will make you oooh and ahhh, and dream about your next fashion statement! I was flipping through this month's Elle. There's some terrific style information in it! Looks like we've made it full circle to the 1970s. For some of us we'll get to relive some of our favourite fashions but there may be some 'yuck' in the group too. Flirty cuts in pretty colors with ruffles and frills are in. Remember the vibrant balloon tops - they are back. As are the wool wrap tops and wool jackets. Super high heels have also made their way back into the picture. Your jewelry selections are wide open for mixing and matching. Big and bold will certainly fit the current trends. Elle says that these items are runway hits: cropped sweaters in acrylic, cotton, or wool. Satin wrap tops ranging from long sleeves to no sleeves, and asymmetrical skirts. The skirts are definitely fun and sexy - black is the hottest color, sequins are very popular, and beaded silk is definitely in. Add some sexy earrings or a sparkly necklace and you're ready for a night on the town. Straight leg wool pants are also in, as well as wool jackets with faux fur collars. Chiffon and satin are big and sleeveless cotton knit turtlenecks are ever so in style. Accessories are bright and bold - hot pink clutches, chintz hand bags, satin and metallic pumps, ballerina flats. Your jewelry can be a mix of bright and bold, and more muted tones. With this year's fashions almost anything goes. Check out the Spring 2005 Elle Runway Some of Ralph Lauren's Spring Fashions are just terrific and they are fitting for almost everyone. Watch the Ralph Lauren Show Alberta Ferretti has some outlandish and fun pieces this season Alberta Ferretti Show Alice Roe has some very sexy looks Alice Roe Show, And check out Balenciaga formal or evening fashions - they are to die for! Balenciaga Show It's a great year to set your own limits and make your own fashion style. There is certainly something for everyone! You may also want to check out some of the other designers such as Blugirl, Calvin Klein, and Prada. Always remember to complete your look with your jewelry!

Everyone knows that when conversing with people online, the veil of anonymity can make people say all sorts of things they wouldn't utter in real life. Blogs, news sites, and other online mediums have been dealing with this problem for years within the comment sections and forums on a website. This extends to the realm of video games, when playing them online through Xbox Live, Playstation Network, or on the PC. If you're a woman, many times you're met with a whole separate experience which can include some extremely sexist behavior. Jenny Haniver, has started a website titled: The premise is simple, she records and documents her experiences playing first person shooters, specifically Call of Duty, and posts these experiences on the website. What you find on her website is pretty shocking, with a lot of it being so extreme it borders on the hilarious. I found this site a few days ago, and was completely taken by it. Once you start listening to some of these recordings, you can't stop. You'll laugh, be amazed, and scared there are people like this who walk among us. I actually got to speak with Haniver about her website, to gain a bit more insight concerning the project. My Recorded Discussion With Jenny Haniver (NSFW: Language) After talking with Jenny, it's obvious she's not looking for pity or to say that everyone acts in the same way as the people in her recordings. She simply wants to shed light on the problem, and show just how bad it can get for ladies on Xbox Live or any other online gaming platform. Here's what Jenny had to say about the site, " And that's essentially the focus of my blog- the dated, hostile, and sometimes downright weird reactions men, and occasionally even other women, have to interacting with females in an anonymous setting that is considered to be male dominated (online video games, specifically first person shooters). Obviously sexism isn't the only problem prevalent in online gaming, it's just the one I've chosen to focus on. This behavior is something that most female gamers will have to face at some point if they choose to game online. The aim of my project is education; some people genuinely have no idea this is going on. By exposing this type of behavior, I'm hoping to raise awareness- and possibly push people to remember that it's a real live person on the other side of that microphone. " To give you an idea of how a recording will go, here's a: RMP= random male player RMP1: Huh? RMP2: Can't end it like that. RMP1: And we got beat by a girl. [laughter] RMP3: Wisconsin, what's up! Me: You say that like that's a bad thing. RMP2: Nah it's cool. As long- as long as you're skinny. [laughter] RMP1: Her avatar is pretty hot. RMP2: So are you skinny? RMP3: Who is? The website spun out of an, highlighting many of the quotes she recorded for the project. She also set up an audio booth, represented by a blue controller and a pink controller. They doubled as MP3 players, with the blue controller playing sound bites from a male vantage point, with the pink playing what women hear while playing. The website is a humorous, albeit sad look at what many people resort to when provided an anonymous shield. The only way you can combat this kind of nonsense is to call it out, and let other people know what's happening. Haniver is just doing that in a creative, and funny way.,, So you love designer handbags? No one's disputing that. All we have to do is look in your wardrobe and stare in wonder at the various shapes, sizes, textures, colors and brands of designer handbags and wallets you have in there. Prada, Fendi, Gucci, Balenciaga, Miu Miu, Christian Dior... If it can be named, then it's somewhere in your wardrobe. But that's not enough. You want to step up to the plate and share your love for designer handbags with other people by starting an online business. I congratulate your entrepreneurial aspiration and can assure you that it can be quite profitable. However before you step out of your comfort zone and begin walking on water, I'd like you to consider the following.

1. Make sure there is a Hungry market- No use stocking and selling designer handbags that no one wants to buy. Yes, we know that special purple check clutch bag you bought from a designer store in downtown Tennessee while on holiday gets you stares whenever you go to a party. However it might not necessarily appeal to a mass market when you sell it on your online store. So do some research and find out what styles are hot and are selling. You're in business first and foremost to make a profit and not to be cool.
2. Find a supplier for the items you want to sell- Hopefully you're in this for the long run so you'll want to find a supplier that has a variety of the handbags you want to sell. Your supplier should also be someone you can chat with and seek industry/product advice from. Also ensure the price you are charged allows you to make a profit and stay competitive.
3. Build your website- And you need to be build it fast and furiously. Why? Because its at this stage that we all want to become all artistic and creative. I can assure you that some of the most ugly, unfriendly, full of copy websites out there are great money makers. Also there is something else you want to focus your attention and energy, time and money on and you can't do that until your website is up and ready. A few necessities for your website will include a shopping cart to process orders, a merchant account to accept credit card payments, a disclaimer page, FAQ section, a little bit about you, a contact us page and you're more than ready to rock and roll.
4. Drive traffic to your website- Now this skill is what separates the amateurs from the true pros online - your ability to send traffic to your website. What's the use of having the best website on the planet if no one's going to visit? A few things you can do to drive traffic include- PPC - Pay Per Click advertising which is basically advertising on the major search engines like Google, Yahoo and Bing. People click on your ad and voila! They arrive on your website- Advertising on comparison sites like PriceGrabber, Nextag, Google Shopping etc.- Article marketing - post an article related to designer handbags or fashion on one of the article directories. I would recommend or Place a little bio about yourself at the bottom of the article. When someone finishes reading your article, if they like what they see, they can click on the link in the bio at the bottom of your article which will lead them to your home page or any page you desire. And there are other ways to drive traffic to your website. Don't forget word of mouth.

5. Take care of Your Customers- Some people think because they're online, it gives them the right to treat their customers like kitchen rags. No Ma'am. It very easy for your firm to be reported to an established authority who could black list your firm. Also angry customers could post poisonous comments about your website on Blogs, YouTube, forums etc. You get the picture. Treat them well and they'll become evangelists for your business. If you're not ready to treat them well...matter of fact treat them with excellence, then don't step into the ring. So there you have it. 5 Things I think you should seriously consider before starting your own luxury designer business online. Building an ecommerce business can be a great way to make an additional income and ultimately quit your day job. I would like to share more helpful tips with you.,

The House of Balenciaga was founded by Cristobal Balenciaga as early as 1918. The first boutique was based out of Spain, and then expanded in to Madrid and Barcelona. The designs were worn by the highest level of society in Spain, and by the Spanish royal family. The fashion house was forced out of the country, and into Paris, because of the ensuing Spanish Civil War. Many people might not know this, but Balenciaga's designs were so popular, that people would risk their safety to come to Paris during the Second World War, just to see the designs, and to get their hands on them. Balenciaga also influenced many of the greats that we know about today. Christian Dior called Balenciaga "The Master Of Us All". Indeed, he was a great master, and so much so, that his design protégés are names that themselves are considered masters then, and now. They are names such as Oscar de la Renta, Ungaro, Givenchy, and Courreges. These names in of themselves are prized around the world, but early on in their design careers, these masters were students under Balenciaga. Balenciaga created looks that are now classics, and that are still part of our fashion vocabulary. He created the infamous Square Coat, which is a coat designed with shortened sleeves in the same cut as the coat. His coats were a bit wide in the shoulders, and full in the waist, instead of cinched. He also created the Cocoon Coat, which was popular during the 1950's and into the 1960s. He is responsible for necklines that pulled away from the neck, to create a look of elongating the neck like that of a swan. This look was also very popular during the 1950s. But the thing that Balenciaga created that is still being used in today's fashion is the "bubble skirt." A "bubble skirt" is a skirt or a dress that features fabric that billows out at the bottom, like there is air being blown into it like a bubble. The Balenciaga design was very delicate, but in time, others imitated the design, and especially in the 1980s, the bubble skirt became quite over the top. Today's bubble skirt is significantly understated compared to the 1980s version, but it does billow out a bit around the hemline, to create a look of air in the fabric. Balenciaga the designer closed his fashion house in 1968, and then died in 1972. The house was later on revived in 1986. The rights to the fashion house were bought from the Balenciaga estate, and the fashion house was back in business under the direction of licensed designers. There have been several since then. The brand is now known not only for its dresses, but for its handbags, and for its shoes. Many relevant Hollywood stars wear the label, and the gowns are certainly worn on the red carpets at the best and brightest award shows. Many women flock to the line now, because the line produces fashion forward pieces, and for it's inspiring lines., You ' ll laugh, others imitated the
